Reading Rivers Challenge

This term we are setting all the children a special home learning challenge task. It is to create a 'Reading River' (a creative record of their reading habits) Reading Rivers support children in not only recalling and reflecting on all the things they have read but also offers teaching staff insights into what children are reading for pleasure when not in school.

Reading Rivers show the journey of reading over a set time. Essentially, it is a personalised list, in the shape of a river's journey, with all the things a child reads marked along it. Extra information and details can be added to the Reading River through writing, artwork, or pictures and labels. As well as story or non-fiction books, it can include reading from other areas such as newspapers, magazines, maps, food packaging, menus, instructions etc. Children might add where they read these things or what they learn from them. They might add ratings and review comments. We want the children to be inventive, creative, read lots and have fun!

The deadline has been extended until the start of next term.
